

Cross-Cultural Psychology

A new offering for Fall 2006, this course will investigate psychological principles from a cross-cultural perspective. Students will be introduced to the cultural basics for differing views of reality and how culture impacts time, space, values, sex-roles and human development. Prerequisites are PSY 200, 201, or 202.

The three-credit class will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. and will be taught by Jackie Craft. Interested students should register for PSY-219.